Tax Debate Draws an Emotional Crowd

By JANET PARKER

An emotional, raucus crowd of more than 1,000 San Mateo County taxpayers and employees booed and hissed its way through a debate in South San Francisco Friday night on two controversial property tax relief measures.

What was billed as "The Great Debate of '78" was more often like a shouting match.

Two of the state's opposing heavyweights in the property tax showdown — state Sen. Peter H. Behr and tax-relief crusader Paul Gann — faced a fiery audience fueled by recent property assessment increases of as much as 60 percent.

Behr, R-San Rafael, the author of Proposition 8 on the June 6 ballot, was repeatedly cut off, interrupted and ridiculed by the most vocal segment of the polarized crowd, the supporters of Proposition 13.

Finally, a frustrated Behr — after battling both the crowd and the panel's Prop. 13 proponents for two hours — raised his voice in anger.

"I can not understand how Mr. Jarvis or Mr. Gann can continue to make these bold, bald assertions which are not true," Behr said.

"We keep pointing out things and they keep lying. I'm sick of it."

Behr and his co-panelist, Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco/San Mateo, denied that government leaders are using "scare tactics" — threatening cuts in police and fire protection and the

Supervisorial Friction Brewing

Fitzgerald Views 3 'Nice Guys' As 'Playing Santa Claus'

James Fitzgerald

By DUANE SANDUL

Labeling them as "nice guys who don't know how to say no to pressure groups," County Supervisor James V. Fitzgerald Friday claimed that three supervisors "are playing Santa Claus with the public's money."

"My concern is that good, local government is jeopardized by their irresponsible actions," Fitzgerald charged in an interview.

The senior supervisor listed three projects which the board majority passed by 3-2 votes last month and in March "as reasons why many citizens are favoring passage of the Jarvis-Gann Initiative."

Fitzgerald's allegations put into the public arena what has been brewing quietly behind the scenes for several months — a growing dissatisfaction among particular board members for one another and their politics.

Fitzgerald named Board Chairman Edward J. Bacciocco, and members John M. Ward and Fred Lyon as supervisors "spending money when the public is telling us "no!"

His claims brought these reactions:

Bacciocco, who is facing re-election challenges in the June 6 primary from Redwood City Councilwoman Marguerite Leipzig and former Woodside councilwoman Olive Mayer, said, "Fitzgerald is passing the buck.

"We've had three great opportunities to save money this (fiscal) year, and Fitzgerald wasn't there (with his vote).

"I asked that before the board gave the administrators a raise we make them put an incentive program to save money in their departments in effect," Bacciocco said. "There was no second to my motion."

"I asked to continue the

Assessments

D.C. Asks 'Why So Heavy?'

By NANCY STANCILL

Daly City's City Council, citing 100 percent assessment increases to city homeowners, voted Monday to inquire why residential property owners have been assessed so heavily two years in a row.

Councilman Tony Giammona, who suggested that the council direct a letter to San Mateo County Assessor Jack Estes, told the council that he has not heard of any city homeowner who has experienced less than a 100 percent assessment increase in two years.

Mayor William J. Schumacher agreed that the latest assessment notices just received bear further investigation.

"Is the North County being discriminated against?" Schumacher asked. "Why is it two years in a row, when assessment increases have been on a three-year basis?"

The other three councilmen agreed that a letter should be sent to Estes, with copies to the Board of Supervisors and the area's legislative representatives.

Estes, in an April statement just before new assessment notices were mailed, noted that cities where real property was inspected last year were "trended" this year. He explained that "trending" is establishing the value of a piece of property by using the selling prices of comparable property.

Estes said in April that trending in Daly City would produce an average 16.6 percent assessment increase.

However, several council members questioned Monday whether the new assessment figures are that low.

In another matter receiving close attention at Monday night's council session, the council set a public hearing date of May 23 to discuss City Manager David Rowe's proposal to increase business license taxes before the Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative goes to a statewide vote June 6.

Rowe recommended a revised schedule that would increase the amount of taxes paid by businesses which do large dollar amounts of business in the city.

The business license tax currently is computed on a declining percentage of gross receipts as the dollar volume of business increases. Businesses in

Rehabilitation Still Not Moving Fast Enough In DC, Critics Contend

The passage of an urgency ordinance designed to make bidding procedures more flexible in Daly City's housing rehabilitation program did not stem the tide of criticism of the city's program Monday.

The City Council, which approved the measure to comply with new federal guidelines relating to construction work in the fix-up program, heard from two frequent critics of the program that work still is not being done fast enough to suit applicants.

Ernie Pezzola, co-director of the Original Daly City Protective Association, said he has contacted many of the applicants whom the ODCPA urged to take advantage of the federally sponsored low cost loan program.

He mentioned, without naming the specific applicants, why they have been told that money is not available for such emergency repairs as roof work. He said a recent check with City Manager David Rowe revealed that $117,000 of the city's Housing and Community Development Act funding remains to be spent.

Community Development Director Don Fleming said that during a meeting of the Rehabilitation Loan Committee last week, the committee approved 19 loans which will utilize $60,000 of the remaining funds. He said the city has kept a small reserve to handle emergency loans before new fiscal-year grant money is received.

There has been a delay, Mayor William J. Schumacher said. However, he added that the council has worked recently to give the city's consultant, Ward Connerly, complete control and authority in implementing loans.

Pezzola and Conrad Pavellas, another co-director of the ODCPA, have criticized rehabilitation loan officer Barbara Hill and other city staffers' involvement in the program, but have praised Connerly's efforts.

Pavellas continued to criticize staff efforts before the council Monday.

"There has been callous, uncaring and brutal treatment of our applicants," he said. "The city does not have the right type of personnel who care to handle this."

Rowe said if the two would make a formal, specific complaint about staff members, he would investigate any alleged instances of misdealings with rehabilitation applicants.

However, Pavellas said the ODCPA had decided not to make a formal complaint, because "that might lead to an exoneration."

In other matters, the council:

"PORTABLE" — Requested that the staff report on the alternatives for relocation of the portable building which houses the Daly City Community for Children's Services.

The primarily state-funded child care facility, which is located in a city-owned building at George Washington School, has received notice from the Jefferson Elementary School District that it must move from the site in August due to increased school needs there.

FEES — Set a public hearing date of May 22 to discuss increasing building permit fees to reflect levels recommended by the county's building officials' organization.

Rowe said the proposed fees would take care of 88 percent of the city's expenses incurred in issuing building permits, rather than the current 61 percent.

RENT — Requested that City Attorney Albert Polonsky research what the city can do to aid residents of the Franciscan Mobile Home Court in a complaint that they are being subjected to $55 rent increases without due process.

SUPPLEMENT — Voted to allow Julius Castelan, director of a federally funded project to paint houses of low-income owners, a $2,500 supplement to the city grant.

DRAIN — Told residents of Garwood Drive that the city would study a storm drain problem that has dumped oil and other liquids on the street.

Not All Left Happy

Knotty problems presented to the Pacifica City Council Monday night could not be resolved to everyone's satisfaction.

Senior citizens, owners of vacant lots and residents who live near a public park left the meeting muttering about the council's failure to solve their problems.

A contingent of 17 seniors who reside at Casa Pacifica made the most noise when council members denied a recommendation by the city's Transportation and Safety Commission to install a signalized crosswalk opposite their living quarters.

Instead, the council voted to study the feasibility of installing a crosswalk at the nearby intersection of Aspen Drive and Terra Nova Boulevard.

Hugh Miller of the Transportation and Safety Commission said that adding a crosswalk opposite the entrance to Casa Pacifica would save the seniors from walking an extra quarter of a mile on their round trip to Park Mall Shopping Center.

The only existing crosswalk is down the street, at the intersection of Oddstad and Terra Nova boulevards. Rather than walk the extra distance, seniors have been jaywalking at mid-block, across busy Terra Nova Boulevard.

Miller said a pedestrian-actuated signal would cost $10,000 or less. The city staff has estimated the cost at $15,000 to $20,000.

Miller said the commission found the otheralternatives unacceptable, namely:

• Leaving the situation as it is.

"People will continue to cross at mid-block and sooner or later, we're going to have a tragedy," Miller remarked.

• Adding a painted crosswalk or flashing yellow light would give the seniors a false sense of security, he argued.

• Putting in a 3-foot-high chainlink fence down the middle of Terra Nova Boulevard to prevent jaywalking, would make the seniors walk too far, he said.

Jefferson Official Disputes Figures

A Jefferson Union High School District official said Tuesday that a statement by the American Federation of Teachers that $1,247,303 is available next year for 10 percent salary hikes for all district employees is "erroneous, misleading and dishonest."

Dr. Robert Watt, assistant district superintendent in charge of business operations, told the Board of Trustees that his calculations on the maximum revenue limit for 1978-79 show that about $540,000 will be available for salaries.

He added that the district would have to generate about 400 more units of Average Daily Attendance to be eligible for the sum the teachers claim the district would receive next year.

Watt expressed concern that the AFT disseminated the information, which it said came from figures "verified by Dr. Robert Watt." He said he merely supplied enrollment figures to the teachers' union.

"Whoever wrote that handout is full of baloney," he added.

Dr. Harold Tonini, deputy superintendent and chief negotiator for the district, said "That particular bit of misinformation by the teachers came out just before an all-teachers meeting."

The AFT held an all-teachers meeting Monday which resulted in a near-unanimous vote of "no contract, no work in September." The AFT Monday also received strike sanction from the San Mateo Labor Council.

At Monday's teachers' meeting, AFT bargaining team member Jackie Yokota said the $1,247,303 figure was calculated through enrollment projections.

The AFT and the district, in negotiation since last October, are to go to a fact-finding panel May 22 in an attempt to resolve salary and teachers' rights issues for the 1978-79 contract.

"I think it is unfortunate that we have to deny statements made from the other side and that there are sides," said Trustee John Sloane.

But he added that district officials have "taken much more appropriate action in recent weeks than the teachers."

The board agreed, after some discussion, to request district officials to present to the teachers the district's figures on revenues.

In other business, the board received a proposal by Superintendent Floyd Gonella concerning district action if the June 6 Jarvis-Gann initiative passes.

Gonell, noting that the district is expected to lose $6 million in tax revenues if the initiative is approved, recommended that the district close schools March 1, 1979 if that occurs.

He said that closing schools next March would be preferable to a 40 percent cutback of staff at the beginning of the school year.

The board took Gonella's proposal under advisement and said it would consider the matter further at a May 16 meeting.

In another matter, the board heard a lengthy presentation by representatives from district high schools on the students' proppsal for an open campus trial period.

An open campus policy would allow students to leave school premises during lunch periods, which range from 45 to 55 minutes.

Gary Robinson said a poll of students showed they favor the privilege "to relate to the community."

Steve Boides, Westmoor High School student body president, said, "It's very important to be treated like an adult. I think we are mature and responsible enough for this."

Scott Galehouse, Terra Nova High student body president, added, "Though most students are satisfied with the cafeteria programs, many would like a change of pace and a chance to run errands at lunch."

The request, for a nine-week trial period to test the open campus policy, will be discussed further by the board at future meetings.

In another matter, after some discussion, the board voted 4-1 to instruct Sloane, as the district's representative to the San Mateo County School Boards Association, to look for a location other than the Quail Lodge for the association's spring meeting.

The association has received some criticism in the past for having its spring meeting at the lodge, a golf and tennis resort in the Carmel Valley.

You Can Tell When They Start Selling Off Books

Closure Decision 'Definite'

Trustees of the Laguna Salada Union School District reached the point of no return on their school closure decision when they voted Thursday night to eliminate 13 jobs and to seek bidders for the Crespi School library collection.

Although the trustees had decided in March to close Crespi and half of Pedro Valley School, effective this fall, Trustee Curtiss Landers said it wasn't until Thursday that the finality of the decision hit home.

"This is it. We're selling off a library, folks," he remarked.

The board voted to entertain bids of at least $10,000 and up for the 5,000 volumes. Assistant Superintendent Marvin Morganti explained that most of the books are duplicated in other school libraries and that those facilities have little shelf space.

However, Morganti said, the district will remove all non-duplicated books before showing the collection to bidders.

In keeping with their decision to trim back jobs in line with declining district enrollment, the board voted to abolish the positions of one account clerk, two cafeteria managers, one cafeteria assistant, one school secretary, three school clerks and five instructional aides.

With the exception of the accounting job, which initially was established as a temporary position, Director of Personnel Lucille Foster said it probably won't be necessary to lay off any employees because vacancies have been created by resignations and retirements.

The president of the Classified School Employees Association, Larkin Roller, objected, saying the district's personnel board s supposed to determine job elimination, not the board of trustees.

Mrs. Foster disagreed and said the action was necessary to give the board more flexibility. Board Chairman Rudie Tretten asked the staff to look into Roller's arguments so the board possibly may rescind its decision.

Teacher assignments for 1978-79 were presented in a 16-page document. In addition, the board ratified the decision it made in executive session April 20 to dismiss Gus Eliopoulos. After teaching 23 years in the district, Eliopoulos was found to be incompetent by a competency hearing panel.

Superintendent James Brien presented recommendations for action on four items isolated in a comprehensive needs assessment study involving parents, teachers and district staff.

In response to a need to establish district housing policies, Brien said he intends to make a report to the board in July. He added that he is developing bus schedules for the coming year in hopes of addressing a stated need for bus service that meshes with school programs.

Tretten commented, "I have a real strong bias that no school program should be determined by a busing schedule."

Brien replied that that wasn't his intention.

He proposed using vacant Crespi School as a depository for district supplies beginning July 1, unless an outside party shows interest in leasing the property before then. Needs assessment participants had asked for such a facility.

Brien got a rise out of the board when he suggested that having one school instead of two to serve San Bruno pupils would be a logical way of dealing with the need to address the boundary problems as related to Portola and Pacific Heights schools. Those schools are just over the city border and serve San Bruno residents only.

"The handwriting seems to be on the wall as far as that's concerned," Brien said.

He explained that the San Bruno parents objected strongly to having their children bused all the way down Sharp Park Road and into a back valley of Pacifica to attend high school. But he said every attempt to try to include those pupils in the two San Bruno school districts had failed because it is so complicated to make the change.

Brien said all districts would lose — Pacifica would lose state money due to a decline in the number of pupils and San Bruno would lose because not enough money would be allocated for the first year of operation.

"I'm not sure that I completely agree with the superintendent's philosophy on that," Landers said. "I would hate to think that the only reason we might not take action on that item would be because we would lose ADA (average daily attendance) dollars."

It was the board's consensus that it supports any investigation San Bruno residents wish to initiate.

Ernest Ribera, assistant superintendent of the Jefferson Union High School District, answered questions on how the board of that district adopted high school proficiency standards in compliance with the Hart Bill, which requires pupils graduating subsequent to June 1980 to meet standards in basic skills set by their governing school board.

Landers remarked that he had visited an eighth-grade social studies class recently, noting, "An entire group of worried faces were asking about it and claiming to be working harder to be prepared for it."

Lack of Competitive Bids Brings Criticism

Pacifica Mayor Nick Gust blasted the city staff Monday night for not seeking competitive bidding on a report for the secondary sewage treatment plant that is necessary to keep state funds flowing into the project.

Gust criticized the staff's recommendation that Consoer-Townsend Associates prepare the report at a cost of $21,000 to $30,000.

The firm has done the engineering on both the primary and secondary sewage treatment plants. Gust frequently has questioned the quality of CTA's work.

Councilman Stanley Farber also expressed some concern about the staff's recommendation.

"This price astounds me, astonishes me, blows my mind," remarked Farber. "It seems at this point in our relationship with Consoer-Townsend, we ought to get a break."

But Albert St. Cyr, director of Community Development and Services, said he believes the price is reasonable and could be reduced if the city did not require CTA to spend long hours at meetings.

He said the state Water Quality Control Board agreed that the quoted price is "in line."

Gust declared, "I am surprised that we didn't get this item sooner, so we could put it out to bid."

The report, called the Final Revenue Program Report, must be incorporated in municipal ordinances before the state will make payments beyond 80 percent of the total grant for the plant. Pacifica has received about 70 percent of its grant amount.

Despite the approaching cut-off of state funding, Gust made a motion to get other bids on preparing the report from two companies, Resource Engineering and Envirotech. The motion passed unanimously.

St. Cyr said he would try to return with the other bids by the next council meeting.

Environmental Management Plan Still Confronts Cities

By JANET PARKER

City officials haven't seen the last of the Environmental Management Plan.

The $4.3 million Bay Area clean-up program may be facing conditional approval by state agencies, forcing the plan back to local governments for strengthening, plan officials are saying.

According to plan manager B.J. Miller, several state agencies which must approve the plan before it can be passed on to the federal Environmental Protection Agency are indicating they believe it is not strong enough.

Those agencies, Miller said, include the Regional Water Quality Control Board, the state Water Resources Control Board and the state Air Resources Board.

If the plan's submission to the EPA is delayed beyond deadlines established by Congress, it is well known that federal funds to this area for sewage treatment and transportation could be cut off.

One Bay Area citizens' group, Citizens for a Better Environment, has predicted the San Francisco Bay Area will lose $130 million a year in grants if the plan is not reinforced.

They have written a letter to Tom Quinn, chairman of the state Air Resources Board, outlining their concern.

The nine-county plan led by the Association of Bay Area Governments is turning what was intended to be its last corner this month as it nears the June 10 ABAG General Assembly in San Jose.

At that time, 92 delegates from every city and county in ABAG will approve, reject or modify the controversial plan.

It has already been approved — with substantial alterations — by an ABAG task force and the executive board.

The EPA expects to receive the 550-page plan by June 21 — a date well established in a contract signed two years ago.

State agencies already are angry with ABAG representatives for voting to extend final action on the plan two months.

Miller said the water control agencies are concerned that the plan does not do an adequate job of identifying water pollution problems and designating specific measures to correct those problems.

However, the air quality portion of the plan appears to be in even bigger trouble, Miller related.

The goal of the air quality section is to reduce hydrocarbons emissions in the Bay Area from about 800 to 450 tons a day.

But the various measures in the plan aimed at meeting that goal place a greater burden on the state than on local governments, Miller explained.

For example, the plan calls for all automobiles statewide to surpass the 1977 Clean Air Act auto emission minimum standards by 50 percent.

It also calls for a statewide auto emission inspection program to see if vehicles are meeting clean air standards.

And it requires the owners of heavy-duty trucks with gasoline combustion engines to install emission control devices.

Those three particular proposed rules would require the involvement and cooperation of state agencies, Miller said.

Those concerned agencies, he added, have not indicated exactly how they will respond to the Bay Area EMP.

"Probably their actions will be to conditionally approve it, which amounts to a negotiating process with local governments," he contended.

In other words, the state would approve the plan except for certain portions; then it would tell the Bay Area what is required for full approval.

Local cities and counties, Miller said, would be required to reconsider the plan and decide if they can cope with the conditions established by the state agencies.

"Changes can be made at the General Assembly. But, as a practical matter, I don't think it's going to be changed very much," Miller said.

"It's been through three different bodies, it's undergone considerable revision and there've been over 1,500 pages of amendments proposed. They've all been considered," he said.

"I would be surprised, from a local government point of view, if there were to be any changes in the plan."

Miller said he has no idea how long the approval process will be delayed if the plan is sent back to ABAG and to the cities and counties for changes.

Tax

like — to push for defeat of Prop. 13.

"We don't like to toy with the lives of many people who well will be laid off around the state," McCarthy said, again jeered.

Behr was answered by laughter when he said that the state could conceivably take over all property taxes if the state budget surplus continues to grow.

"I recommend that those of you who scoff...be good enough to look into it to vote on fact rather than the usual emotions that are sweeping the country," Behr advised.

The Concerned Citizens Coalition and the Hillside School PTA of South San Francisco sponsored the debate that attracted residents from all over the county.

McCarthy and Behr, and Gann and Les Kelting, San Mateo County Prop. 13 chairman, were questioned by a panel of news reporters and, in writing, by the audience. Prop. 13 would guarantee an average 57 percent reduction in property taxes statewide. Prop. 8 — a last-minute legislative attempt to reduce the property tax burden — would enact Senate Bill 1, guaranteeing relief of 30 percent.

The controversy lies in the means to the ends of the measures. Prop. 13 would limit property taxes to 1 percent of full cash property value while Prop. 8 would be financed by the state's $6 billion surplus.

Behr said the rival Prop. 13 does nothing for renters while his measure increases the income credit from $37 to $75 a year. The apparently renting segment of the crowd found that humorous.

"Maybe $75 is too little, but it's more than nothing," Behr argued.

However, Kelting responded that landlords are promising to reduce rents because their property taxes will decrease under Prop. 13. He cited a Mountain View owner of 600 apartment units who has made that promise in writing.

"If we are going to trust our legislators, we must have a little trust in our landlords," Kelting said. The Prop. 8 relief for renters amounts to $3 a month (more), he pointed out.

Kelting said in his opening remarks that Prop. 13 is "a clear and unambiguous message to the state and local government that we as taxpayers are fed up."

Many retired persons on fixed incomes have called him with tears in the voices saying they have to move from their homes because they can't afford to pay taxes.

Prop. 13, he said, will force the state government to take over the financing of health, education and welfare.

Gann said the greatest problem with his initiative is that "it's simple, and simplicity is hard to understand."

He noted that Prop. 13 will prevent local government from raising taxes more than 2 percent in any one year.

He said that excessive taxes year after year have created the state surplus.

"It (the surplus) belongs to us," Gann said. "It doesn't belong to some stranger or the bureaucrats who seem to have a lot of control over what happens. It belongs to you and I."

"What's wrong with us keeping the money in the first place? Why should we send it to Sacramento or Washington D.C. and have it laundered so they can take some of it for themselves and send a little back."

The money, Kelting said, too often comes back with strings attached.

Behr said Prop. 8 includes revenue limitations on cities, counties and special districts that were left out of Prop. 13.

In the coming year, Behr said, some $12 billion in property taxes will be collected in California. Prop. 13, he said, would cut that by $7 billion leaving $5 billion to do the work of $12 billion.

Kelting earlier had mentioned the need to preserve home rule and local control over taxes. Behr said that Prop. 13 actually will give the state Legislature "enormous powers" over school financing that it doesn't now have.

At the same time Prop. 8 opponents are chastizing the state government, they are expecting the legislators to swiftly resolve all the complications Prop. 13 would bring to the state, Behr said.

McCarthy blasted the "constant references to generalities" when Prop. 13 is discussed.

He attempted to show how South San Francisco Unified School District believes it would be affected by Prop. 13 — including a $9.5 million cut in a $23 million budget — but was shouted down repeatedly.

The "debates" continued after the meeting as taxpayers in the audience paired off to argue with one another and McCarthy and Kelting lingered to answer questions.

HOUSE ON THE MOVE

A dwelling at 299 Templeton St., which will house a family of four persons, was moved to 134 Los Banos as part of a unique project in Daly City's rehabilitation loan program. The house, shown just before it was moved recently, survived the move nicely, according to the city's rehabilitation loan officer, Barbara Hill. She said the family will be able to move into the dwelling around June 1.

the city now pay between $45 and $2,500 in taxes annually.

Taxes would range from $45 to $9,000 under the schedule presented by Rowe Monday. The upper end of the scale would include a tax of $11,250 on a business with gross annual receipts of $45 million or more, but the city manager said there aren't any businesses of that size located in the city.

"The business license tax schedule should be adjusted so that the percentage of gross receipts does not vary significantly from the lower volume businsses to the higher volume businesses," Rowe said in his recommendation.

Rowe said the revised schedule "does not consider the effect of Proposition 8 (Behr bill) or Proposition 13 (Jarvis-Gann) on the city revenues," but added that any increase in taxes would have to be passed by the council before the tax-limiting Jarvis-Gann, if approved, would go into effect July 1.

Although there was some question by councilmen as to whether Jarvis-Gann would prohibit raising any local taxes, City Attorney Albert Polonsky said he believes the initiative would do so.

Rowe said the revised schedule would bring in $150,000 more annually. The city now is receiving about $300,000, he estimated.

"If the business License tax is to replace lost revenue from the reduction in property taxes due to Proposition 13, the business license tax would have to increase three or four times the current rate," Rowe also pointed out in the recommendation.

He suggested that the council look into that possibility further at the May 23 hearing.

However, at least two councilmen said after the meeting that they would be unwilling to triple or quadruple the rates.

"Some cities don't even have business license taxes," Councilman Victor Kyriakis said, adding that property owners would desire "statewide relief" rather than a burden on local businesses.

Mayor Schumacher said he would not vote to triple or quadruple the rates either and said, "I don't think anyone would."

The councilmen's comments came after listening to several businessmen protest an increase in fees, to reflect possible Jarvis-Gann loss of revenues.

Vince Merlo, a Mission Street tavern operator, said, "Maybe the city should look out for the welfare of the business community."

George Kircchubel, a retired businessman, said he believes such a proposal was designed "to put pressure on the businessmen" to oppose Jarvis-Gann.

Pacifica

on the problems of youths speeding down Oddstad Boulevard.

Mayor Nick Gust said he didn't appreciate Miller's hopeless approach to the jaywalkers and speeders.

"If we have a problem, let's correct it," Gust said, "Let's not say people are going to continuously violate the law."

When Gust argued that people who have been cited for speeding soon learn to slow down, the seniors in the audience hissed and booed.

Councilwoman Eleanor McGuire objected to a mid-block crosswalk, because of a service station that would filter traffic into it.

Police Capt. Tony Guardino greed with her that a mid-block crosswalk would create a false sense of security. However, he accepted Councilman Fred Howard's suggestion of a crosswalk at Aspen Drive and Terra Nova Boulevard as a reasonable alternative.

Miller pointed out that Aspen Drive is 192 feet from the main entrance to Casa Pacifica.

A number of seniors then told the council of their difficulties in traversing the street. Mary Bishop called Terra Nova Boulevard "a freeway." Virginia Mantor said the youths leaving Terra Nova High "don't stop and they laugh at you."

The seniors in the audience clucked disapprovingly when Mrs. McGuire suggested having some seniors volunteer to act as crossing guards for the others. Miller objected, too.

Mrs. McGuire erupted. "I think they're be[illegible]-headed. Mr. Mill[illegible] not willing to listen to any alternatives," she fumed, hastly adding that she had meant the Transportation and Safety Commission when she said "they."

After further discussion, the council voted 3-1, with Councilman Stanley Farber dissenting, to reject the commission's recommendation and to look into a crosswalk at Aspen Drive and Terra Nova Boulevard instead.

There was another show of temper during a public hearing on weed abatement when Gust gaveled Ruth Paige of Keep Pacifica Scenic out of order.

Mrs. Paige had barely blurted out her name at the microphone when Gust asked, "Are you protesting a piece of property that's being sprayed?" When she replied, "No," he told her to sit down.

Drowning out her objections, Gust explained that the public hearing was limited to complaints from landowners regarding weed abatement of their property.

Mrs. Paige retorted, "You have wasted my time, Mr. Gust." She has been a consistent foe of chemical weed abatement.

Earlier in the discussion, the city staff had explained that weed abatement has been delayed so long this year that most of the weeds will have to be removed mechanicaly or manually.

Several owners of vacant lots asked how many times they would have to clear their land of weeds before the city would inspect it and note that they ahd done the job.

They described their frustration at having done the job once, only to find that the city had not bothered to inspect it and that the weeds had grown back.

Weidner clarified that the staff will inspect property within 10 days after the landowner notifies City Hall that he or she intends to clear the weeds.

Those who fail to weed their land are billed by the city for the job.

One man said he thought the city should tell him how much it would charge before he decided whether to do the work himself. No one could give him an exact idea of the cost.

The council voted to close the public hearing on all but a few specific cases that would be resolved at the following meeting. Weed abatement is expected to be completed within 60 days.

A man who lives adjacent to Fairmont West Park presented a petition signed by 40 homeowners in the area requesting that night games not be played on the baseball diamond there.

The resident, Ken Vogel, explained that he was bothered by the huge lights that illuminate the field for games scheduled every weeknight. He said children rarely get to use the field since baseball players arrive at 5 p.m. and another league plays on Sundays.

He also complained that baseball players cannot get into the locked restroom in the park, so they relieve themselves behind his fence, and also litter the area with beer cans and paper, and drive over his lawn.

Mrs. McGuire suggested that Vogel put blackout shades on his windows to keep out the light.

Nonetheless, the council did resolve some of Vogel's complaints — authorizing a 3-foot fence be installed between his property and the field and that the restrooms be unlocked when teams are using the diamond.

Director of Recreation Virginia Jaquith said all baseball teams were notified that they will be kicked out if they don't show more courtesy.

Vogel was not entirely satisfied. He continued to object that the council had taken no action regarding the lights.

Stressing Back To The Basics

The 1978 Summer School Program in the Jefferson School District is stressing "Back to the Basic Three R's." While basic skills is the core of the summer school, enrichment courses will be integrated in every school program to add flavor to the curriculum.

All K-5 students will take a reading/language class and mathematics class on their level, either enrichment or remedial. Sixth or seventh grade students will take the basic skills classes upon teacher recommendation and approval.

The five-week summer school program from June 26 to July 28 will be available in 13 schools, 12 elementary (K-5) grades and one centralized intermediate (6th-7th grade). Abraham Lincoln, Crocker, Colma Elementary and Intermediate, General Pershing and Benjamin Franklin Schools will be closed.

The pre-kindergarten program will be offered again to children four years, nine months of age by September 1 and who will be enrolled in kindergarten for the 1978-79 school year. The emphasis is on getting ready for kindergarten and enjoying their first school experience.

Special education, with the exception of learning disability, will be continued for the students. The number of classes is dependent on enrollment and number of credentialed teachers available.

A summer lunch program will be available at the regular school price of 50 cents.

Bus transportation will be provided for students who are bused during the regular school year and the junior high students in the Benjamin Franklin and Colma Intermediate area.

Registration forms are available at the schools.

Dr. Linus Pauling: Crusader For 'C' Against Blah Bureaucracy

Dr. Linus Pauling poorly hides his frustration in dealing with the bureaucracy of such a medical titan as the National Cancer Institute.

He bristles and shifts his hulking, grey-suited frame when discussing the institute's reluctance to conduct a controlled experiment on one of the most exciting projects of his half-century career: the treatment and possible prevention of cancer by massive doses of Vitamin C.

His wisps of silver hair are so appropriate on a man whose work has been compared in magnitude to that of Albert Einstein.

He is twice a winner of the Nobel Prize.

"I tried to get the NCI to carry out a controlled trial five years ago and they refused," he says. "They said they wouldn't do anything until some animal work was done."

He is speaking in the dark second floor office of the Linus Pauling Institute in Menlo Park.

"I applied for a grant to do that work (on animals)," he continues, "and was turned down.

"I applied every year for five years and was rejected each time, even though research had been done on humans."

Never known as a scientist who plays it by the book, the maverick Pauling asserts unabashedly that the NCI is traditionally over-cautious in allocating any of its millions in government funds for study of unique projects.

The institute historically has approved funding for research on projects that have been studied repeatedly.

"With this kind of funding they won't get into any kind of trouble," he adds.

"I am astounded at the medical profession in the little interest it has shown in the discovery that large doses of Vitamin C have a real value in controlling cancer."

Such outspoken comments have never endeared the inimitable Pauling to the hierarchy of medical science. But his tenacious and persistent lobbying efforts for the Vitamin C project did pay off earlier this year.

The NCI begrudgingly and with little fanfare quietly agreed to sponsor a controlled trial at the famed Mayo Clinic in Minnesota. There, 150 terminal cancer patients will receive megadoses of ascorbic acid or Vitamin C to determine if the substance has any appreciable effect on the control or the prevention of cancer.

Although admittedly anxious to receive the results of the tests — not likely to be available until the end of the year — Pauling's own research has convinced him that there is a distinct relationship between Vitamin C and the control of the disease that is responsible for one-fifth of all deaths in the nation.

In fact, since Pauling bridged the field of chemistry and nutrition, bolting into the public debate on health in 1970, he has discovered that ascorbic acid taken in significant doses can protect against the common cold, measles, pneumonia, hepatitis and influenza.

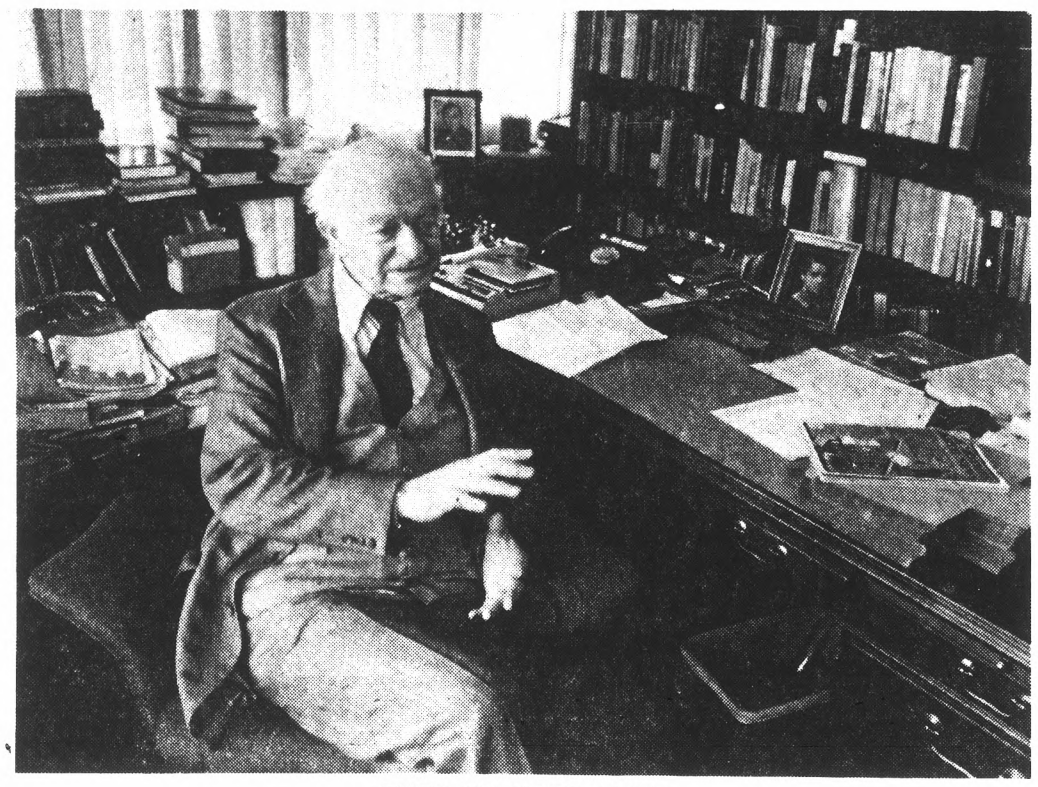
The publication of his book "Vitamin C and the Common Cold" and his public pronouncements of the varied health benefits Vitamin C can yield stunned the medical community. Nutritionists accused Pauling of interfering in their domain and expressed even greater outrage at Pauling's going public with results of his research and ideas — something that's just not done in the scientific sector.

Such aspersions hardly rattled the 77-year-old Pauling. He has weathered staunchly a career scarred from the salvos hurled by opponents of his political and professional stands.

Pauling survived criticism of his public attack on atomic testing and weapons development and accusations made during the McCarthy era that he was affiliated with the Communist Party.

Winning the Nobel Prize for chemistry in 1952 for his research on the chemical bond and then again in 1962 for his peace efforts, however, diminished the attacks on his politics and catapulted him into the scientific limelight. Some have compared his findings to those of Einstein, Newton and Marie Curie.

Many of Pauling's most important early studies were conducted at Cal Tech, where he worked as an assistant professor of theoretical chemistry from 1922 to 1963. It was there that he carved his singular mark in the field of chemistry with his work in chemical bonding, immunology, sickle-cell anemia and how massive doses of niacin can be beneficial to persons suffering from acute schizophrenia.



THE LAIR OF THE LION

Dr. Linus Pauling is tenacious in pursuit of Vitamin C projects.

It was in 1966 that Pauling was introduced to the possible benefits of Vitamin C. He and his wife of 50 years, Ava, took large doses of the vitamin daily on the advice of a biochemist, Erwin Stone, who had devoted much of his career to the study of ascorbic acid.

The daily intake was little more than a personal habit with the Paulings, until he made a speech in 1969 noting the health benefits he and his wife had derived from it.

Again Pauling was verbally assaulted for spouting publicly unproven theories in an area that had enjoyed no widespread research.

Resigned to defend his remarks, Pauling launched into a concentrated study of the subject to determine if scientists had indeed examined the association of Vitamin C and good health.

Within several months, Pauling discovered that there had been some 14 controlled experiments, including one important study conducted by the late Dr. Harold Chope, director of the San Mateo County Department of Health and Welfare.

Chope and Dr. Lester Breslow, chief of the Bureau of Chronic Disease of the State Department of Public Health, delivered a paper in 1955 dealing with Vitamin C to the American Public Health Association.

The doctors interviewed 577 randomly selected residents of San Mateo County in 1949 who were 50 years old and older. Pauling says that when they examined the death records and compared the age-corrected death rates they found that the intake of Vitamin C had the greatest correlation with the death rates.

"The death rates for high Vitamin C subjects," comments Pauling of the Chope-Breslow study, "was only 40 percent as great as for the low Vitamin C subjects."

In their joint paper, Chope and Breslow had further stated: "The maintenance of good ascorbic acid intake and blood levels may be important to support a good oral hygiene, not only in the preservation of the teeth, but also the prevention of serious gingivitis (inflamation of the gums)."

During his studies — which eventually led to his book "Vitamin C and the Common Cold" — Pauling found that ascorbic acid seemed to strengthen the body's immunity system and acted as the mortar that binds cells together.

He delivered an address at the University of Chicago in 1971 about Vitamin C and its potential for the prevention of cancer.

A published account of the speech was read by Dr. Ewan Cameron, chief surgeon of a large hospital in Scotland. He wrote Pauling of his interest in the subject and the two joined in a major study.

Pauling relates that in 1971 Cameron interviewed some 100 patients who had been given veritable death sentences due to advanced cancer — patients who had failed to respond to surgery, radiation and even chemotherapy.

Cameron gave these patients 10 grams of Vitamin C daily and compared their progress with 1,000 terminal cancer patients treated with medication other than ascorbate.

The results, published several years ago, says Pauling, showed that the Vitamin C-treated patients have lived on the average of four to five times longer than the "matched controls."

Sixteen of the 100 ascorbate-treated patients lived more than one year than doctors said they would have, whereas only three of the 1,000 matched controls lived that long.

Further, Pauling says, all the 1,000 patients have died and all 16 of the 100 Vitamin C-treated patients are living, and a dozen of them "seem to be free of the disease."

"It's apparent," comments Pauling, "that Vitamin C treatment seems to have some favorable effects on all kinds of cancer."

The chemist-nutritionist collaborates with Cameron and other scientists interested in the potential health benefits of Vitamin C from a ook-lined office tucked in the rear of the Linus Pauling Institute for Science and Medicine in Menlo Park.

With the aid of a former student, Dr. Arthur Robinson, Pauling established the institute in 1972, when he left Stanford University. The purpose of the tax-exempt facility is to study nutrition and to conduct research on aging and degenerative diseases.

The controversy over Pauling's outspoken manner in hailing the findings of Vitamin C research clouded his and Robinson's efforts to generate government funding to sustain the institute.

The fledgling research center in the first few years of its operation teetered dangerously on the cliff of bankruptcy. The two scientists ultimately decided to pursue private funding and enlisted the aid of Richard Hicks, an executive of the Dean Witter Co.

Hicks' campaign to promote the institute as an investment in the good health of mankind, secured for the center slightly more than 20,000 individual donations, and today nearly half its $1 million annual budget comes from non-government sources.

Besides the research on Vitamin C, the institute is immersed in the study of preventative medicine, principally under the auspices of Dr. Robinson. Dozens of scientists are working with spectrometers and chromatographs, constructed by institute staff, to isolate chemicals in body fluids, mostly in urine.

Pauling explains that certain patterns of chemicals have been found in the urine to match certain diseases.

The institute has found patterns that match multiple sclerosis, mental retardation, muscular dystrophy and cancer.

Search also is being undertaken for patterns relating to infantile autism and schizophrenia.

Using these chemical patterns, new procedures are being sought at the institute to establish low-cost routine screening of large numbers of patients to detect and treat disease before the usual clinical symptoms develop and the life of a patient is imperiled.

"My God, Man, politics in California is so terrible it should be inhaled through gas pipes! Give me a book to clear my mind."

All right. From the "what's new department" comes a novel, "Trocadero," by Leslie Waller. Publishers Weekly calls is "a tale of intrigue, suspense and high stakes."

THE TROCADERO is a section of Paris where the French hide their treasures and where priceless collections of art may be stored and protected. Waller's novel tells of a terrorist group, fronted by an American heiress, that holds the entire contents of the Trocadero in a worldwide bid for ransom.

It is a book that tells about people who are caught in a web of intrigue. Each moves in a peculiar relationship to the others. There is the mother who has spent her time multiplying the fortunes she has inherited from her deceased husbands. There is the daughter who seeks a better world by associating with the denizens of the back alleys of Paris. There is the revolutionary and the blackmailer, the woman of intrigue, the security officer, the French police, and others. "Trocadero" is fun to read. It is like a TV show in print.

If logogriphic novels with spies and crooks galore is not your speed, try Frank Tallman's "Flying the Old Planes" (Doubleday $14.95) for a change of pace. In this book the "King of the Stunt Pilots" takes you along, into the cockpit, on flights in twenty-five historic airplanes.

WITHOUT leaving your armchair you fly over Orange County, California in a World War I German Fokker E III and feel the thrill of climbing 600 feet a minute at 75 miles per hour. With Tallman, you barnstorm the West Coast in a flying Jenny, which pilots called a lady mule. You learn that Admiral Byrd used a Ford Trimotor to survey the South Pole because it could be landed on many different types of terrain.

With the late Paul Mantz, Frank Tallman founded a company, called Tallmantz, that is involved in all phases of aviation. He trains helicopter pilots and maintains helicopters for police departments throughout the country. This company furnished a flying replica of Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis. They did the stunts for the movie, "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World." For "Catch-22" they assembled twenty aging B-25 bombers and trained their crews to fly them to location in Mexico.

FOR STILL another change of pace there's Ralph Pomeroy's big, wonderful book, "The Ice Cream Connection" (Paddington $7.95). As your mouth waters, you learn that ice cream is the dessert of carefree people.

"Ice cream has been fought over by fan and foe, denounced by prude and pulpit, flaunted by kings and queens and co-featured in films. Poets have mocked it, great chefs have re-invented it." It has been the symbol of wealth, yet the companion of the pool.

In 1974 Americans ate 786,000,000 gallons of ice cream and spent $500,000,000 to enjoy its tastes. Even animals like ice cream.

D.C. Storytelling Program Planned

The Daly City Public Library will begin a new storytelling program for adults on Thursday, May 18, according to City Librarian Samuel Chandler.

Sponsored by the History, Arts and Science Commission, the program will debut at 12 noon at the Westlake Library.

"Everyone is welcome to bring a brown-bag lunch and relax with an old tale or new best-seller," Mr. Chandler said. An assortment of beverages will be provided by the Library staff.

The first program features three Russian short stories, to be read by Philippa Bornstein, an employee at the Serramonte Library.

Mrs. Bornstein, with training in the dramatic arts as well as storytelling, is in charge of the children's story program at Serramonte. She believes that storytelling appeals to all individuals, regardless of their age.

"Often when a story is told aloud, something is shared between the storyteller and the audience," commented Mrs. Bornstein. "When the story deals with human nature, it often tells us something about our own life."

"Besides, the story can be entertaining," she emphasized. "Above all, we intend to read stories that people will enjoy."

The storytelling program is tentatively planned for every first and third Thursday at the Westlake Library. Upcoming programs will include reading of science fiction, detective stories, and other popular works.

As an annual event, the program recognizes the outstanding skills of student drivers in San Francisco schools. Joining them for the occasion is Patrick Quinlan, instructor of the special program for handicapped students.

The annual rate for residential single - family sewer service will increase from $40 to $43.

For commercial users, the increase will be from 34 to 37 cents per 100 cubic feet of water used. That same formula applies to restaurants for a hike from 73 to 78 cents. Increases also are tabbed for industrial users.

Pace Quickens as Year Ends

Ram-blings

By STEVE KAUFMAN

Things are getting busy at Westmoor High School as the school year begins to wrap up. The prom spirit is beginning to rise, as well as many other events being put on.

Congratulations to the Hermanos Latinos Club for an excellent Cinco de Mayo celebration. Many students came outside to hear the sounds of Ritmo '74 and tasted many different types of Latin American food. Mr. Bracco, the advisor, and his club, put out a lot of work into this event and they did an outstanding job. Good work!

FIVE OF Westmoor's senior students wore tuxedos to school to advertise Selix Formal Wear as a possible tux rental company for those who are going to the prom. John Cosmos and Chris Toohey wore them May 2 and Mark Barradas, Gary Robinson and Keith Harband wore them May 3. All five modeled them that Thursday.

The five walked around the campus during lunch periods and handed out business cards from Selix as well as monogrammed pencils. The models also wore the tuxedos to all of their classes. As a reward for all of their work, Selix gave them their tuxedos for the prom free of rental charges. Selix is offering Westmoor students a 10 percent discount on tux rentals. Thanks to the five for all of their work.

Prom bids went on sale starting last Monday for $15 per couple. They were sold during lunch fourth and fifth periods and those wishing to go to the prom purchased the tickets then. They will be on sale up to the date of the prom May 26.

WESTMOOR'S Drama Department presented its spring play May 4, 5 and 6. "The Subject is Women" was the theme of the production and was a series of three one-act plays. The plays were presented to large audiences each night and the cast and crew were excellent. I personally enjoyed the play.

To promote the production the department had previews of each of the three plays. Students in all periods except fourth went during their respective English periods and were brought into the Little Theatre to watch. This is an effective means of promoting the play as well as giving the cast a sort of dress rehearsal. Congratulations for yet another outstanding performance.

The members of the cast included Marcia Kludgian, Teri Cinti, Margaret Morris, Steve Boides, Rita Boides, Ian Johnson, Babbie Frieberg, Clive Reece, Norman Howard, Brian Russell, Ricardo Saucedo, Dean Palmer, Alison Jenkins and Maria Mendoza. The talented crew behind the curtain included Paul Grosshans, Lisa Braski, Anette LaStella, Gina LaStella, Colin Price, Craig Stenberg, Mary Anne Fau, Donna Sabitini, Jay Peirce, Roy Bautista, Annette Fusaro, David Gamberg, Greg Yanazzom and Barbara Nadeau. Of course, who can forget the talented and dedicated director, Ken Brown. Good work!

STUDENTS who lost their yearbook receipts received a chance to still hold onto their yearbook. Those students gave their names and a dollar to either Angela Rizzo or Brian Russell, who will set aside the books for those people when they come.

Students wishing to attend summer school in the Jefferson Union High School District can pick up the schedules in the counseling hallway anytime during the day. Those who wish to enroll in sports conditioning should pick up a special form from Mrs. Montanos, the counselor secretary.

Included in the summer school program is an opportunity for students to become a community service/teacher aide. If a student likes children and people, wants to get involved in the community, investigate a possible career, or earn high school credit, this summer program could be right for them. For information and applications, see Mr. Ramage or Mrs. Gross in the Career Center, or the counselor's secretary.

CONGRATULATIONS to the Auto Club for putting on yet another great car show April 28. Students viewed all sorts of different cars and motorcycles. Highlighting the show was the display of some of the McGlennan family cars which most students liked. The overall winner was Tony Merjano. The winner of the best display went to John Rodriguez, who highlighted his old-time Nova with mirrors and lights. Also, thanks to Mrs. Pat Oxenham for helping in the presentation of the awards, and to Sue Starin, club president, and to George Chrestionson for a job well done.

The show was marked by KRAM's first broadcast outside of the cafeteria. In an effort to promote the disco dance, two large speakers were erected hastily on the roof overlooking the show. After every few numbers the disc jockeys encouraged the students to buy their tickets. The staff at KRAM all had a good time.

The gimmick worked, for 250 tickets were sold to the second disco in Westmoor's history. The dance, put on by KRAM and the Close-Up participants, was equal, if not superior, to the one recently, according to many of those who went. Although the fog machines weren't up to par, the lights and the sound were great and nine lucky people left the dance with new albums won in the drawing. The disco was disc-jockeyed by Keith Harband and Anthony Fernandez. Thanks to all of those who worked hard to put on this successful dance.

THE OPEN Campus Committee went before the school board recently to answer questions put to them by the trustees. The questions covered the policies and plans of the trial period proposed. Steve Boides, one representative, said it went well and hopes the board will approve the plan.

Congratulations to Frank DeCoito, the proud father of a bouncing baby boy. I asked him if he wanted any more children and he said, "I think that's enough for now!"

Any seniors who are going to Disneyland on Grad-Nite '78 attended a short meeting May 4 in the Little Theater. Mrs. Merjano, the representative, distributed conduct and dress codes to those seniors and discussed the trip with them.

OPEN HOUSE went well. Many parents came to Westmoor April 27 to meet with teachers and discuss various issues regarding the classes and their child's progress. Also, the cake sale brought in $66.50, half of which will go to the freshman class. Thanks to the PTA for all of its hard work.

The Country-Western rally went off well. Although attendance was down, the excitement was the same. Congratulations to the junior class for winning the competition. Get-well wishes to Joy DiRicco, who suffered some torn ligaments during the competition. Try to keep in mind as you hobble around the school that it was all in fun.

SPORTS — It's been a busy week for baseball at Westmoor. The Rams are in fourth place, keeping a close pace with third-ranked South San Francisco. The Rams beat Jefferson April 28, giving them a 1½-game lead over the Oceana Sharks. This gives them excellent shot at a playoff berth. Mark Navarro hit a two-out bases loaded triple in the first inning for an immediate 6-0 lead. Later, Tom Bonomi who drove in a run in the first by walking and hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning. Tich Baxley pitched the game.

One key element on the team is the junior shortstop Dave Maxion. He hit two singles in the Jeff game and is the batting leader with a .382 average. He also is a valuable fielder.

Westmoor's varsity track team is in second place, following top-ranked Serramonte. The Rams beat El Camino 103-14, helped along by double-winner Art Schembri, who won the mile and two-mile. Keep up the good work.

CONGRATULATIONS to the swim team. On the varsity level, the Rams won the NPL Swim Finals, giving them the crown. The finals were close as the Rams were pursued by second-place Terra Nova. Tom Wisherop was the only gold-medal winner, posting a 103.4 in the 100 backstroke. The 200 medley relay got the gold medal, swum by Wisherop, Brett Beedle, Jim Stockman and Peter Chai. Also, the 400 freestyle relay was won by Westmoor, posting a 3:41.5. The swimmers in that race were Bill Beedle, Paul Chai, Wisherop and Jim Stockman. Also, Peter Chai, Mark Barradas, Tim Horn, Bruce Parker in the diving competition, and Brian Watson, Tammy Stuckert, Dan Cinti and Ken Nolan won medals in the finals. Congratulations for a good season.

The requirements to donate are: ages of 18 (or 17 with parents' approval) to 66 and must be in good physical health.

Those wishing to donate may call Hansel at 992-7289 or write to 1013 S. Mayfair Ave., Daly City 94015.

Donations will be taken May 20 at 312 90th St., Daly City, across the street from the Daly City Civic Center, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Refreshments will be provided for all donors by McDonald's on Junipero Serra Boulevard.

The Regent

By JULIE SMITH

Five members of the Serramonte Sprockets bicycle club were among the 25 entrants in the Open Race for ages 13-17 April 16. Those five were Kyle Brutschy, Joe Keegan, Pete Lenci, Davd Lewbin and Tom Swope.

Kyle won the first place medal and Pete took the fifth place medal. This was one of the best races in which the Sprockets competed and next year they will be ready to enter more riders.

SO FAR the Sprockets have pedaled 82,311 miles and have completed 36 rides this school year.

Circus Vargas is coming to Serramonte High School May 12, 13 and 14. Serramonte students can attend the special Friday night show at 8 at a discount price. Tickets are on sale for the special show for $3.50 without a student body card and $2.50 with. You may obtain your discount ticket through any student involved in a club. Each club has been issued 20 tickets to sell to make a profit. The ticket price for Saturday and Sunday is $4.75.

IT'S WORLD Team tennis time again. All faculty and students are invited to participate. Last year was the first year Serramonte had World Team tennis and there were a lot of faculty members, even the principal, Dion Dubois. If you are interested you can sign up with Lindsay Chu or Mr. Doctolero. The first meeting will be May 12. The fee is $2 and one new can of tennis balls. This fee will be collected at the meeting. So, all you tennis players, young and old, are urged to come out and join the fun.

SERRAMONTE will have next year's sophomore, junior and senior class officer elections May 18. The offices available are president, vice president, secretary and treasurer. Anyone with a 2.0 grade point average may run for an office.

Usually the class officers are elected in September, but this year Serramonte decided to have the elections now so the officers could start right away in September.

Trip to The Park

A St. Andrew's Day, for St. Andrew's Catholic Church in Daly City, has been set for July 30 at Candlestick Park. The church group will take over the VIP box that day for a doubleheader between the San Francisco Giants and the Chicago Cubs.

Seating is limited to 150 persons. Tickets may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Anne Murphy or the church office. There will be a no-host bar, free Giants souvenirs and surprises. Mrs. Dolores Callaghy of the St. Andrew's choir will sing the National Anthem before the games.

Further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Murphy, 992-5865.

Friction

hiring freeze through 1978, which the staff said would have saved $1 million, but again there was no second to my motion," Bacciocco asserted.

"I tried unsuccessfully to chop $3 million from the budget last year," he continued. "I got some seconds on some motions, but Fitzgerald didn't put his vote where his mouth was."

Lyon said of Fitzgerald's "Santa Claus" comparison, "That's absurd. Our mutual goal on the board is to reduce expenditures wherever possible . . . I don't know what prompted this, but I think that Mr. Fitzgerald has mistaken my reasons for these actions."

"I'm surprised," Ward said of Fitzgerald's claims. He methodically responded to each of the projects raised by Fitzgerald.

Asked if his declaration implied political overtones aimed at Bacciocco's re-election bid, Fitzgerald said, "If that was true, I wouldnt bring in my pals Lyon and Ward. They're nice guys to work with but they're driving me crazy on their expenditure policies."

Fitzgerald said that Supervisor William H. Royer and he have been in the minority of several votes in recent months involving the expenditure of money. Royer was said to be on vacation Friday.

Maintaining that his comments were "out of frustration" and not political, Fitzgerald would not endorse Bacciocco's re-election bid, and refused to reveal how he intends to vote.

Ward also declined to disclose whether he'll vote for Bacciocco, but Lyon gave an emphatic "yes" when asked if he would, and added, "This thing is probably related to Bacciocco's election."

But Fitzgerald said his remarks were concerned with public expenditures.

"Even I can see the frustration of the public when I see my colleagues spending money like this," Fitzgerald asserted. "Jarvis-Gann is not the answer but the public is frustrated because they feel they have no control over the politicians anymore.

"I feel that my colleagues are flying in the face of the public's mandate, which is to reduce government expenditures," he added.

Fitzgerald criticized Lyon, Bacciocco and Ward for their votes on these projects:

• A transfer of $188,000 to cover the cost of funding Fair Oaks Clinic from October 1, 1977, through April 30, and the board's action last month to operate the clinic on a permanent basis, at an annual cost of about $75,000.

• Approving a joint purchase with the Midpeninsula Regional Open Space District of the state's surplus college site off Edgewood Road west of Redwood City if the state Legislature passes a bill which reduces its cost. The county share would be $583,750. Those residents who are members of the Midpeninsula District, from San Carlos through northern Santa Clara County, would match it.

• Agreeing to pick up an additional $198,000 of assessments for curbs, gutters and sidewalks "generally paid for by the property owners" along an improvement project on Alameda de las Pulgas near Menlo Park.

Lyon, Fitzgerald and Ward traded comments about those actions.

Fitzgerald said that the Board in March 1977, when it voted to keep open Chope Hospital in San Mateo, also decided to phase out the satellite clinics, such as Fair Oaks.

"On that, when the people screamed for Fair Oaks, the board majority couldn't say no," Fitzgerald said.

Ward said that the $75,000 to fund the clinic is from the health and welfare budget anyway, but Fitzgerald said that the funds "are coming out of savings from Chope Hospital that we had hoped to use to cut the budget next year."

Ward noted that he voted with Royer and Fitzgerald, initially, to close the center "because we couldn't afford it."

But then, Ward said, "We got sued, and went on a month-to-month basis . . . the pressure group wanted us to accept Drew (an alternate proposal) . . ."

Lyon said, "As for the Fair Oaks Clinic, there's a documented health need in the area. We're not appropriating funds from any contingency but from funds set aside for health care facilities, so I presume there is some political motive behind Fitzgerald's statement.

"But as to me, I don't know what it is since I don't happen to be up for re-election this time," Lyon said.

Fitzgerald said that the purchase of the Edgewood site was not a prioritized item for park and recreation acquisition.

"But moreover, the taxpayers have already paid for the land once," Fitzgerald said. "Why should they have to pay for it again?"

"That involves simply taking money from the parks and recreation fund, which is allocated for acquisition for parks and open space," said Ward.

Lyon agreed, and called the purchase price "a real bargain if the bill authored by (State Sen. Arlen) Gregorio goes through. We'd only have to pay one-half of half the value of the property."

Finally, Fitzgerald said that Bacciocco, Lyon and Ward changed a board policy which results in the expenditure of $198,000 of gas tax funds for Menlo Park improvements which "most people along the street pay for, one way or another.

"When a pressure group came from the Alameda and screamed and clapped, the majority of the board changed a long-standing board policy," Fitzgerald asserted.

"That money comes from gas tax funds, and the owners will pay for undergrounding, which is policy," Ward said.

"The policy has been that when a road is for regional use, the board is willing to pick up the cost for it . . . the only difference is that we did not go for a four-lane project, but because it was still a major thoroughfare, it met the same criteria as a four-lane road," Ward said.

"We did change the board policy so that it was possible for the real needs of the people to be met rather than to adhere to an inflexible engineering standard that didn't have anything to do with the needs of the people," Lyon said.

"It involves all gas tax money which can only be used from roads, Lyon added. "The road Fitzgerald wanted was larger and would have required acquisition of property by the county for rights-of-way and would have cost twice as much. So he's not talking about economy. He's talking about the fact that we didn't vote for the road he wanted."

Bacciocco stuck with his general comments and did not partake in the exchange between the supervisors on the three supervisorial projects.

Demos Tiff Over Use Of Name

Use of the name "Democrats" by a coalition of San Mateo County Democratic Central Committee members sponsoring candidates for the committee in the June 6 primary is being questioned by a group of members left off the endorsed slate.

The endorsing coalition, which includes committee Chairman Richard Silver and Joe Holsinger, administrative assistant to Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-San Mateo, has taken the name "Democrats for a More Effective County Central Committee."

Use of the name "Democrats" without the express permission of the Central Committee was questioned at the committee's most recent meeting in San Mateo.

Silver noted that the committee charter provides that any group wishing to use the name "Democrat" in its title "may" be chartered to do so by the Central Committee, but there is no specific requirement for such.

It was agreed by the two factions that Audrey Ohlson, a vice chairman of the committee, will seek an opinion on the matter from the district attorney's office.

U.S. SURPLUS

Le Pacini

If the A's have surprised you, they shouldn't have — at least not greatly. Oakland has a roster filled with promising, hungry young players who weren't around for all of the bitterness and thus carry no hard feelings onto the field and who aso know that no matter what happens they eventually will be heading for the greener fields of Denver — or someplace. Ironically, the poor attendance may be working in their favor, because they are essentially playing in front of minor league crowds. Thus, many of the players probably still think they're in the minors, which relieves a lot of pressure.

Because nobody expected anything of them they have nothing to lose by playing it loose. And don't take lightly the fact that the A's may be playing in the weakest division in the major leagues.

SO, BECAUSE Charley Finley had the good sense to trade for youth with Pittsburgh and San Francisco, which have two of the better farm systems in baseball, the A's will make a respectable showing this season if their pitching holds up.

But, you say, if anything, that is the Oakland strength. Maybe. But right now the A's pitchers are basically a staff of kids having fun and throwing nothing but high, hard ones and getting by with it. Many hitters begin to catch up to pitchers the second time around, just as pitchers learn more about hitters the second swing around the league. But in this case the veteran AL hitters have a better chance of learning more and learning better than do the raw Oakland pitchers.

The real pessimists might add that the young Oakland hitters also might collapse the second time around, but Oakland hitting hasn't been that strong the first time around, so doesn't have as far to fall if and when the league's veteran pitchers begin catching up to them. So, as always, the pitching is the key; and if it holds up decently, the A's could score less and still win with some consistency.

MEANWHILE, there have been some critics who have said that if Finley wasn't being so stubborn about not letting center fielder Billy North play, the A's would be even better because of the stabilizing influence of the only remaining member of the old powerhouses. Actually, North's absence from the regular lineup may be one of the keys to the A's success. North simply never was that good, and looked as good as he did only because of the talent that surrounded him.

All North can do really is run exceptionally fast. He is a poor outfielder whose mental mistakes haven't shown up in the box scores. With all of his speed he should have stolen more bases and been consistently around the .300 batting mark instead of being the .260 (with no power) lifetime batter he is.

And because of North's wont to be moody and a complainer, and because he often has not hustled and in fact dogged it, I can't help but feel that he would serve as a poor example to the enthusiastic kids now playing regularly for Oakland.

REGULAR center fielder Tony Armas (now on the disabled list) still makes some rookie mistakes, but seems to be basically a sounder outfielder with a superior arm. He's always it for power, and this year seemed to be picking up consistency. (.295) before he was injured.

Finley, the old gutter fighter, seems to have done it again. The American League "brains" must be sitting around wondering what the A's would be drawing if they were in Denver, and if they are, chances are Marvin Davis is, too. And Charley probably is wondering if he now can pump his price up another $1 million.

Some of the old street-fighter single owners of the past might have been able to cope with Finley, but the new breed corporate types never have had to deal with anyone quite like him.

DOES anyone want to bet against the A's moving to Denver this season? I don't. Why? There has been an ominous silence about a move in the past weeks, and when nobody's talking it's usually almost certain that the rhetoric has been displaced by action.

Or, as Wyatt Earp used to say about gun fighters, "As long as they were talking about what they were going to do, I knew I was safe. The minute they stopped talking, I knew that something was going to happen."

THOSE TOUGH losses and non-decisions that were besetting John Montefusco, though apparently not upsetting him as such tough luck might have in the past, demonstrated not so much the growing maturity of Montefusco as an example of one of the benefits to the players of long-term contracts.

In the past, when a pitcher was almost invariably paid based on his number of wins the year before, hard-luck losses could cut appreciably into his future income. But Montefusco now knows that he is going to make X amount of dollars no matter how many games he wins, so all he has to worry about is pitching well for his team and for his pride. In this way, long-term contracts may make many players better team men.

The Count now can assume the attitude that he will do his job by pitching well, and that if the everyday players don't do their jobs by fielding well and scoring runs behind him, well, there is nothing he can do about that.

BY THE, same token, big contract hitters now may not have to worry about how many line drives have been picked off on them, and may be more willing to do team things like sacrificing a few points off their batting averages or a chance at more RBI's by hitting behind a runner to put him in better scoring position for the next hitter.

SUDDEN THOUGHTS: Giants outfielder Jack Clark doesn't seem to be able to handle the twisting drives hit into right field, often is confused by them, and even seems to give up on some of them. Terry Whitfield is, at this point, a more heady and steadier outfielder who never gives up on anything. It might not be a bad idea for the two youngsters to switch positions.

Or, possibly, Clark would do better in center field, where he has some experience (he broke in with the Giants at that position), where his sheer speed would serve him better, where the balls are hit truer, and where he can get a better look and therefore a better jump on the ball. Larry Herndon, a better outfielder than Clark, with a good enough arm for that position, could perform ably in right field.

If anyone is wondering why the Giants aren't stealing all kinds of bases, going crazy hitting-and-running, and bunting all over the lot, as it was publicized they would do after a spring training full of lessons on such activities by Maury Wills, the answer is simple and in two parts:

1. To be able to steal and hit-and-run and bunt, there must be men on base, a technique which the Giants have yet to master.

2. Wills has not often been with the Giants since spring training ended, and young pupils tend to either forget their lessons when the teacher isn't around to constantly remind them, simply ignore those teachings which might not be fun (bunting) or of great personal benefit (hitting behind the runner), or not feel the tendency to "show off" their learning when the teacher isn't around to praise them.

El Camino Bags NPL Crown

By JOHN MURPHY

El Camino High pitcher Roger Ruzek had two strikes on Serramonte's Sucre Herrera with two outs in the seventh inning before losing his no-hitter Friday at Marchbank Park.

Herrera singled sharply to left to break up Ruzek's no-hit bid. Ruzek also proceeded to lose his shutout. But the hard-throwing righthander still picked up the 7-2 win, and that was all that mattered as El Camino captured its third consecutive North Peninsula League round-robin championship.

The win boosts El Camino's NPL record to 12-1. Next week is reserved for make-up games in the NPL, and then the following week the Colts will be gunning for their fourth straight playoff championship (South San Francisco won the round-robin in 1975 but lost in the playoffs to El Camino).

Ruzek lost his no-hitter on a walk, an RBI single by Vince Rovai and an error. Colt first baseman Dana Ynostroza then ended the threat by snaring a line drive.

El Camino tallied a single run in the third after leadoff man Danny O'Regan doubled to right field. Ynostroza followed with a two-strike single to left to make it 1-0. The Colts then added the only other runs they needed in the fourth inning after Jeff Pettigrew and John Canepa hit off-field singles to right field. Paul Domeniconi moved them along with a tapper to the right side, and then O'Regan made it 3-0 with a solid rip up the middle.

O'Regan, who has been steadily increasing his batting average, collected three hits and reached base four times in five appearances. Ruzek upped his NPL pitching slate to 4-0.

South City and Terra Nova kept pace with each other in their battle for second place as host SSF rallied to beat Jefferson 7-5 while visiting Terra Nova bombed Oceana 16-2. Both teams are now 9-3 with two make-up games left to play.

Terra Nova, led by the slugging of Mike Diaz, scored 16 runs on 16 hits to obliterate Oceana.

Diaz had a home run in the fourth with none on, a three-run homer in the fifth, and a double. Both of Diaz' round-trippers carried well over 400 feet.

South City, with standout junior hurler Steve Bertolozzi on the sidelines with tendonitis in his right elbow, started Ken Herrle and trailed 4-1 after four inning.

But in the fifth, Jerry Selvitella cut the margin to one run with a triple that knocked in two. He later scored on a single by Glenn Kramer.

Kramer was eventually squeezed home by Jerry Pirillo for the go-ahead run.

In another league encounter, host Half Moon Bay upset fourth place Westmoor 5-1. Art Reyes' three-run homer in the fifth paced the Cougar win. Reyes now shares the home run lead in the NPL with Diaz; they have five apiece.

Kidnapping Suspect Arrested at Airport

A 24-year-old male janitor who works the day shift for an airline at San Francisco International Airport was arrested early Thursday for allegedly kidnapping a female janitor who works the graveyard shift, sheriff's deputies reported.

Sheriff's Deputy Robert E. Messier said Robert Lee Jones Jr., 24, who refused to give his address, apparently had been attempting to date Chris Evans, 23, of South San Francisco.

Messier gave this account of what happened this morning.

Miss Evans and another janitor were approaching a hangar in a company truck when Jones approached them and attempted to pull the young woman from the vehicle. When the other janitor attempted to intervene, Jones pulled out a knife and threatened him.

Evans drove the truck two-tenths of a mile away with Miss Evans inside as the other man called deputies.

Messier and Deputies James E. Meyer and Anthony J. Grado Jr. arrived on the scene around 1:30 a.m. and took Jones into custody on charges of kidnapping and assault with a deadly weapon.

August Rites Slated

The First Southern Baptist Church in South San Francisco will be the setting Aug. 19 for the marriage of Bonnie Mobile and Les W. Freckman, both of San Bruno.

The 2 p.m. ceremony will be followed by a reception at the Boiler Room in San Francisco.

Bonnie is the daughter of Betty Ware of South San Francisco and Vernon Ware of San Bruno, who will give her in marriage. Sheryl Landry of Louisiana and Ron Ware of South San Francisco are her sister and brother, and Mrs. Augusta Fleming of New Orleans and Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Dial of Oakdale, La., are her grandparents.

Les is the son of Mrs. Mary Freckman of Daly City and the late Leslie Freckman Sr. Bill Freckman of San Mateo, Patti McCarthy of Daly City and Linda Peek of San Jose are his brother and sisters. He is an alumnus of Terra Nova High School.

Lexie Caracter of Daly City will be the maid of honor and bridesmaid duties will be shared by Linda Aguiniga of San Mateo, Angela Black of San Francisco, Steph Turner of Pacifica and Les' sisters.

Vickie Fleming of Old Station will be the junior bridesmaid for her cousin's wedding, and Renee Fleming of Old Station, another cousin, will serve as the flower girl.

Les has asked Spiro Makras of Daly City to perform best man duties. His brother will share ushering duties with Rudy Mazzetti of San Bruno, Dave Morath of Pacifica, John Dentoni of Daly City, and Bonnie's brother.

Police, Schools Support Safety

The Daly City Police Department and the Jefferson Elementary School District are among the most ardent supporters of an organization known as BASSPEC, Bay Area School Safety Program Executive Council.

The organization, founded by police officers who worked with school safety patrol programs, meets quarterly to exchange ideas and information related to the total picture of safety in and around our schools.

The spring meeting is devoted to honoring student leaders of the patrol groups at a luncheon, at which their school principals serve as sponsors.

Such a meeting was held yesterday in Yountville. Superintendent Pete Hansen, who has long been a supporter of the program, arranged for 23 of his principals and their safety patrol captains to attend. He also attended, with other school administrators, to honor the children who have done so well in their responsibilities.

It is important to call attention to the fact that there has never been an injury accident at a station where a school safety patrol member is on duty in Daly City, Hansen said.

Yesterday's session was a prelude to School Safety Patrol Day, which will be May 24 at the Cow Palace. In that celebration, the Navy Band from Treasure Island will provide music, and the members of all safety patrols are invited to attend, and pass in review for the City Council, chief of police and other dignitaries. Parents and public can attend. Mayor William Schumacher has issued a proclamation setting forth May 24 as School Safety Patrol Day. During the ceremony, Chief of Police David Hansen will present awards to the captains of each patrol group represented.

Officer Neil Hammermann is serving as director of the school safety patrol program for Daly City, and is a past president of BASSPEC.

He reports that the Jefferson School District has been one of the most involved in attending meetings, and developing new programs and ideas through the contacts established in BASSPEC.

"The support of the district clearly demonstrates their commitment to the youth and the community they serve," Hammermann said.

First Meet Outside SF

The Northern California Chapter of the Society of Association Executives will hold its annual meeting and installation dinner dance at the Ramada Inn in Millbrae May 20 and 21.

It is the first time the organization has held its annual meeting outside of San Francisco.

Some 150 members are expected to attend. Lee Adler, executive vice president of the California Grain and Feed Association and California Seed Association in Sacramento, will be installed as president.

Services Center Loses SSF Fiscal Agent Help

The South San Francisco City Council Wednesday night decided to no longer act as fiscal agent for the Neighborhood Services Center, a social services agency.

The 3-1 vote, on a motion by Councilwoman Roberta Teglia, specified that the fiscal services provided by the city would terminate at the end of ths fiscal year, June 30.

What it means is that the Neighborhood Services Center, which operates out of the Hillside Recreation Center in South San Francisco, will have to find another bookkeeper to keep track of its records, beginning July 1.

By acting as the agency's fiscal agent, the city was spending about $9,000 yearly, in addition to its $18,000 annual revenue-sharing contribution to the center, William Anderson, finance director, told the council.

"The city has been extremely good to the Neighborhood Services Center over a three-year period," Mrs. Teglia said, "but now their budget is $500,000 and they've ceased to be a small organization. They're big-time now and they're flying."

Councilman Ronald Acosta agreed. "It has become a large organization," he said. "It has become large enough to handle itself. The burden of the fiscal responsibility should not be with the city."

The NSC has a budget this year of $484,493, with most of it coming from federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) funds. Four cities, South San Francisco, San Bruno, Brisbane and Millbrae, originally contributed to the center, but several weeks ago San Bruno decided to withdraw.

Anderson told the council that because the center has grown, the fiscal responsibilities of the South San Francisco Finance Department have grown accordingly, making that function very time-consuming for the city.

The Neighborhood Services Center still will have to find a bookkeeper, and Anderson suggested that it acquire an accountant or enter into a contract with some agency, such as a bank, to provide audit services.

"Agencies like ourselves (which donate funds to the center) will continue to insist on an audit," Anderson said.

Councilman Terry Mirri, who voted against the proposal, said he wanted the city to continue to act as fiscal agent.

"It is our obligation to see it (the $500,000 program) is administered and spent properly," he said.

Anderson also said he believes there is an excellent chance that San Bruno, which paid only half of its $20,000 contribution to the center for 1977-78, will provide another $4,000 to cover services provided between Jan. 1 and April 11, when San Bruno decided not to fund the center.

San Bruno City Manager Gerald Minford said today that he will approach the City Council with such a request at the May 22 meeting.

Mrs. Teglia also requested the city staff to study South San Francisco's policy of allowing the Neighborhood Services Center to use the Hillside Recreation Center free of charge for its headquarters.

She suggested the city should consider taking the center back for its own use, perhaps selling it as surplus or renting it to the NSC.

In other matters, the council:

- Established a committee of Mirri and Mrs. Teglia to look into the problem of a pathway at El Camino Real and Mission Road.

One school student told the council that walking the pathway is not safe now. The city is considering a $100,000 expense to build a new pathway, and hopes to share the cost with the South San Francisco Unified School District.

- Approved a one-year ordinance to allow the Youth Baseball Managers Association to sell packaged goods at Orange Memorial Park and Buri Buri Park during the 1978 baseball season.
- Approved an agreement with the California Highway Patrol and the State Police for training police officers.

Robbery Part of Series?

Two men held up Roland's Discount Records store at 6133 Mission St. at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in what may be the latest in a series of robberies in the area near the San Francisco city line, according to Daly City police.

The two men, one carrying a black handgun, held up the clerk and took a wallet from a woman, Corrine Cecchi of Daly City, who was in the store, police said.

The money loss hadn't been determined as of this morning, but the woman's wallet was found later, with the money gone, near Alemany Boulevard and Sickles Street in San Francisco, just across the county line, police said.

A Fotomat store at Alemany and Sickles has been held up several times recently, police noted. The two suspects were described as black, 18 to 19 years old, 5 feet 7, with one wearing tan tweed trousers, a red floral shirt and waking with a list. The other, carrying the gun, was said to be wearing a black hairnet, black windbreaker and black trousers.

Councilman Won't Sign

San Bruno City Councilman Doug Dawkins has refused to place his signature on plaques of appeciation to be given to two council incumbents who were defeated in the March 7 municipal election.

The plaques, which have been signed by the other four member of the City Council, will be presented to former council members Tony Governale and Marge Kozkowski.

Governale, in his bid for re-election, placed third in a race for two seats. He was defeated by Dawkins and Tom Ricci, the top council vote-getter. Mrs. Kozkowski was defeated by Dick Griffith in the race for mayor.

"If these two were to receive appreciation plaques," Dawkins said, "then anyone who runs for office should receive a plaque for their efforts."

Dawkins called the plaques "superfluous" and said that both Governale and Mrs. Kozkowski have "many plaques and awards from the city. I see no reason for another one."

He added that if the council gets in the habit of giving appreciation plaques "it would take a good part of every day." There are others in the community, he said, who deserve such plaques for their efforts, but have not received them.

Dawkins also said such plaques "are not customary for defeated candidates. Mayor Griffith was not given a plaque when he was recalled."

Griffith, first elected to the council in 1970, was recalled the following year. It was at that time that Governale and Mrs. Kozkowski were elected.

The laminated plaques will bear the signatures of Griffith and Councilmen Ricci, John Bernard and Gary Mondfrans. A blank space will appear in place of Dawkins' signature.

Flowers Are Fair Theme

Spring flowers will be the theme of the Friends of the Daly City Library's 14th Annual Spring Book Fair Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Garden Court and adjoining areas of Westlake Shopping Center. Truckloads of used books, records and sheet music will be sold. Silent auctions of unusual items will be at 10 and 11 a.m.

Over 50 boxes of children's books have been processed at prices of 5 cents and up. A speciality this year is a large number of travel books, the personal exploits of the adventurous. Many National Geographic magazines also will be offered.

A feature of the silent auction is a 14-volume gardening encyclopedia set in mint condition. Among nostalgic items included in the auction is a hardback edition of "Long Live the King," Clark Gable's autobiography.

Accepting responsibilities at the fair are: Lois and Rush Manbert, trucks and transportation; Alice Barichievich, parking lot lanai and staffing assistant; Mike Cooney, mall area; Verna Teglia, posters; Olga Canada, Virginia Duckett and Cecilia Enright, records and music; Denise Schwarzbach, scouts; Louene Rossina, silent auction; Joseph Riley Jr., assistant, and Virginia Tierney, coordinator and staffing. Members, including young people, and Scout groups will be staffing and assisting with setup and closing. Also cooperating will be the recreation and fire departments.

Proceeds from the fair will benefit the public library.

Student Program

Gains Told Against Booze

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Coordinators of an alcohol education program argued convincingly that they have succeeded in improving the attitude of youngsters in the Laguna Salada Union School District toward alcohol.

"We don't know if we have actually affected their behavior but we hope so," said Paulette Bellis.

Representing Pyramid Alternatives, an alcohol rehabilitation agency hired by the district for the second year in a row, Ms. Bellis said the eighth-graders appear to have benefited from an alcohol education unit they received last year.

She described the findings of a survey of 260 sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders who are about to be instructed in alcohol abuse, noting that only the eighth-graders had the benefit of previous instruction on the subject.

The district embarked on the program last year when it learned that alcohol has become a major problem among youths.

Among the findings of the survey:

- Forty percent of the sixth-graders, compared to 8 percent of the eighth-graders, think most alcoholics are bums or "winos."
- Forty-five percent of the sixth-graders vs. 16 percent of the eighth-graders believe alcoholics are middle-aged or older.
- Seventeen percent of the sixth-graders vs. 41 percent of the eighth graders agree that alcohol is a bigger problem than other drugs.
- Fourteen percent of the sixth-graders vs. 57 percent of the eighth-graders knew that black coffee does not help a person sober up faster.
- Thirty-six percent of the sixth-graders vs. 55 percent of the eighth-graders don't think that drinking too mu h hurts only the drinker.

Ms. Bellis stressed that it is hard to compare the statistics from the pre-survey last year with those of this year because only seventh- and eighth-graders were in the program in 1976-77.

However, one startling statistic shows that 49 percent of the students surveyed last year said they felt pressure from their friends and peers to drink, compared to only 18 percent this year who said they do.

Pyramid Alternatives will survey the students again after they have finished the alcohol education unit in June. The agency also plans to ask teachers what they think of the program.

The trustees appeared upset that only 28 parents showed up at 11 parent nights scheduled to inform them of the program.

Trustee Marilyn Wills suggested telling parents some of the findings of a survey last year to convince them of the importance of alcohol education.

In the 1976-77 survey of seventh- and eighth-graders in the district, Pyramid found that 62 percent had used alcohol.

Forty-nine percent of the sixth-, seventh- and eighth-grade students surveyed this year said they drink, but that percentage was affected by the addition of sixth-graders. This year, 63 percent of the eighth-graders said they drink.

The cost of this year's program is $7,500. It provides a five-day educational unit to all sixth- seventh- and eighth-grade students, makes counseling available to individuals and families, provides training for school staff and parents, and measures the success of the program through surveys.

Robbery Suspect Held

A stakeout at a local motel Tuesday by Daly City police netted them a man they say they believe committed a grocery store robbery April 29, and who was found to be carrying a loaded pistol, a false San Francisco adult probation officer's identification card and who is an apparent bigamist.

Arrested was Marvin William Galliher, 30, residing at the New San Francisco Motel, 6925 Mission St., Daly City, where detectives had located Galliher's car and staked it out at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Following Galliher when he left, Detective James Mendiara and Officer Stephan Srock pulled the car over. They reported finding in Galliher's possession a .22 caliber automatic pistol, handcuffs, and the probation officer's ID card.

Further investigation revealed that Galliher recently had married a Daly City woman but that he already was married to another woman in another state, the officers said, adding that the San Francisco Adult Probation Department had told them Galliher once was a CETA legal clerk there but had no authority to carry a probation officer's ID.

Galliher was booked at the Daly City jail on suspicion of armed robbery, carrying a concealed weapon without a permit, carrying a loaded firearm in a vehicle, bigamy and impersonating a police officer, the latter because a probation officer has peace officer status under the law.

The robbery for which Galliher was arrested occurred at 8:30 p.m. April 29 at the Mid-City Market, 6718 Mission St., Daly City, according to police.

City Unit Member Review

In a late-night brainstorm just before adjournment, the Pacifica City Council voted unanimously Monday to evaluate all the members of its commissions.

Councilman Fred Howard first suggested that the council ask all commissioners to turn in their resignations and then reappoint those it wished.

He explained that he believes some of the current appointments were not made in the best interest of the city.

"Some (commissioners) may be qualified, but there are some who are not," he said, adding, "I am not looking for a philosophy."

However, it is well known that the predominance of the council shifted from pro-environmentalists to anti-environmentalists after the March election. The staunchest environmentalist on the council, Mark Savage, was absent Monday.

Councilman Stanley Farber said he was concerned with the wording of Howard's proposal.

"I think the majority (of commissioners) are well qualified but there are some who, quite frankly, I can't wait 'til their terms are up," he said.

Nevertheless, Farber remarked, "I am uneasy about a carte blanche everybody-turn-in-their-resignation."

Councilwoman Eleanor McGuire also said she is concerned about requiring mass resignations. She suggested reviewing all commissioners and giving them a chance to live up to the council's expectations before asking for anyone's resignation.

Howard agreed to change his motion to incorporate the evaluation process.

"I don't care how we say it, as long as we get this done," he said.

The council approved Howard's motion 4-0.

SSF Man Finds Wife Dead

The body of Mrs. Marvel Sweeney, 51, of 131 Springwood Way, South San Francisco, was found by her husband, Harold, when he returned home from work Wednesday afternoon, the coroner's office reported today.

Her husband told investigators his wife had been suffering from depression. Deputy Coroner Steve Hortin listed the death as a suicide.

NorthAmerican Van Lines Needs You —

— as a business partner in their growing fleet of owner-operators.

If you want something more than just a job, then North American wants you as a business partner.

In this partnership, you'll be an owner-operator with all the freedom of owning your own small business and at the same time have all the advantages of big business behind you.

We'll give you the professional assistance to help make your business on wheels a success. Such as complete training (if you need it), and we'll offer you what we think is the best deal on a tractor in the trucking industry.

As in any partnership, it requires an initial investment of $2600 to $4300, which includes the down payment on a tractor and interim living expenses during training at North American.

To qualify, you must be 21 or over, in good physical condition, have a good driving record, and be able to meet the financial requirements.

If you qualify, we have an immediate need for owner-operators. So take the first step to being your own boss, with North American as a partner ... by calling Toll Free: 800-348-2191
